JANE

Well I'm walking in the lane, Jane, for a while
You'll never find me in the street drain for to hide
You will drop me down like water for your pride
See me in the lane, Jane, for a while

Well I'm walking in the lane, Jane, for a while
Through its tiny little wood frames and their smile
You will rub me down your shoulders in your style
You'll find me in the lane, Jane, for a while

When the moon is up and I am already to sleep
When the stars are up and we are too tired to greet

Then you'll see me in the lane, Jane, for a while
Like a minor in a blues brain, deep inside
You will bugger off like thieves deep in the night
While I'm walking in the lane, Jane, for a while

When the moon is up and I am already to sleep
When the stars are up and we are too tired to greet

Well I'm walking in the lane, Jane, for a while
You'll never find me in the street drain for to hide
You will drop me down like water for your pride
See me walking in the lane, Jane

INTO THE SUN

Every day I wake up in a cage of glass
And as I see they come I feel all my veins
When they lift me out and press me down
My body shakes and so does my brain
In one word ...insane

Do I have brothers and sisters too
Or are they just red-eyed copies of me?
Was I just born to give my worthless life
As one of them, one-by-one?
I wish I could fly into the sun

Every day they take a part of me
Is it my destiny to live in pain?
They are not ashamed of abusing me
Same torture again, do they have fun?
I wish I could fly to the sun

Suffering for beauty and for medicine
For the service to the human kind
They are taking everything from me
But my pain, it's a shame for each one
I wish I could fly into the ...sun!
